AI printables and small files

Solve a Tuesday problem. Mood boards are a hobby. Trackers are a product.

Who this is for

You can design a clean one-page tool: tracker, checklist, wall print, planner page.

First sale

Someone prints the $9 file.

Time to first

2–10 days

Cash window

$7–$12 single, $19 bundle

Tools

Canva, a mockup, Stan or Etsy, AI for copy not for stolen art.

Leave this alone

Generic aesthetic planners with no job.

What sells

Search language is the product title. 'Weekly content tracker for solo hairstylists' beats 'Cute planner 2026.' AI can draft the copy on the page. You still design the layout so it prints without eating the margins.

Your own site keeps the customer. Etsy rents the aisle. Use the aisle if you have no traffic. Move them to email when you can.

The first 72 hours

Make three related pages. List one at $9. Bundle at $19. Mockup on a table, not a floating PNG if you can help it.

Title with the job and the person. Publish. One post showing the filled page, not the empty one.

The path, step by step

Step 1. Tuesday problem, one page.

Step 2. Print test. If it clips, it is not done.

Step 3. License: your layout, your words. Do not sell other people's illustrations.

Step 4. Seasonal updates if the niche is seasonal. Do not invent 400 listings in a week.

Step 5. A how-to page on your site that ranks for the job, then sells the file.

Mistakes

Low-resolution files. Selling trademarked characters. Empty pages. Ignoring print bleed.

Copy and week-by-week

Title the file with the job and the person. Show a filled page, not a mood.

Week 1: three pages live. Week 2: a $19 bundle. Week 3: one how-to post aimed at the Tuesday problem.

Close the book. Do the first 72 hours. Do not tour the rest tonight.
